Tremendous Fire at St. John, N. B. The new Market, several Banks, and the Mayor's Office, all gone. Twenty-four vessels burnt.

We learn from Mrs. Whidden, of Calus, who came passenger in the Eastern stage, that a few hours previous to her leaving in the stage, the mail from St. John, N. B. arrived, the driver of which reported that he left that city in the heart of the largest fire ever experienced there. The fire took in a sail loft, and immediately spread and destroyed twenty-four vessels lying at North and South Market Wharves. The splendid new Market House, with several Banks, the Mayor's Office, and a large and important part of the city were burnt.

From this account, the fire must have originated upon the old burnt district, and most of the principal buildings destroyed, must have been new. St. John does really seem to be a doomed city, as this is the third fire, destroying each time, a large portion of the city, and much valuable property, which has been experienced there within a comparatively short period. We cannot but hope this account is exaggerated, but if so it must have been by the mail driver from St. John, as our informant is of the highest respectability, and had the best opportunity to obtain the information correctly, which the driver brought. We shall probably receive slips this evening, giving the particulars.

Weekly Summary.

We have had almost all sorts of weather, the past week, rain, snow, fair, cold and warm, besides a good deal of threatening weather that did not amount to much. No freshet yet in the river, and that makes it bad for our lumbering friends, as they have about three millions feet of lumber, up river, ready for the market, which, if they could get it down would help along amazingly as the whole of it is needed to supply the demand. At the time of writing this, there is a little prospect of mild weather, and perhaps rain. Gen. Vauze has started his ship down river to complete her arrangements for her voyage to New Orleans. Previous to her leaving, the General gave a splendid supper to his workmen, for the satisfactory manner in which they performed their labor. We trust she will prove so fortunate as to induce her owner to build one of equal beauty and size each year. The revival of business here this season has caused our stores to be pretty well filled up this fall. The stock of goods is heavy with the exception of flour, which is rather lighter than usual. The selection or Declaration is nearly ready for Texas, and will carry out passengers to add moral and social worth to the new Republic. Such citizens are much needed, if the half said of the people there be true. The Governor let up in the right time for Thanksgiving, for its premonitory symptoms, I think, are, Pork, round Hogs, Beef, &c., begin to make their appearance in the market, in large quantities, and at fair prices. Turkeys at 7c, geese at 8c, poultry at 7c, hogs at 4c. Farmer Wright, of Hallowell has sent to our market, a lot of his splendid apples, two hundred and fifty to a barrel, and all as smooth as a butter leg. Our neighbors Goodale, Crowell and others, have been turning their goods of fine fruit to make Thanksgiving go off with a bang. While fruit has been brought from Massachusetts, and all along shore, not forgetting the "Rarers" from the farm of Mr. Deane in Longmont. Marrying is getting to be rather more fashionable among our young folks, and that is certainly a sign of prosperity.

Ship-Building.

The Thomaston Recorder states that another barque of 238 tons, was launched at the Shore Village in that town on the 13th inst. She was built by Dea George Thomas, and to be commanded by Capt. J. Crockett, Jr. Her name is the "Teaser."

We learn from the Belfast Signal that on the same day there was launched at Camden, the Ship Meganticook, of 473 tons, to be commanded by Capt. Shubael Maro. She was built by Mr. Thomas C. Bartlett, of Camden, in the staunchest manner, and for beauty of model and naval architecture, will not suffer in comparison with any that have been built in Maine. Thomaston and Camden are places of much commercial importance, and are justly characterized for enterprise and thrift. They do business in a safe manner, and within their own resources, and have become rich.

The barque Nancy W. Stevens, of 350 tons, says the Eastport Sentinel, was launched at Calais, from the ship yard of Capt. Free G. Parker. She is the largest vessel ever built in that town, and is said to be unsurpassed for model, material and workmanship. She is to be commanded by Capt. Ignatius Stevens, of Portland.

We learn that a new barque was launched a day or two since, at Brewer. Will some one furnish the particulars?

The Deaf, Dumb and Blind Girls—Meeting of Laura Bridgman and Julia Brace.

The following deeply interesting correspondence respecting the two most remarkable deaf mutes in the world, is from the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

HARTFORD, Nov. 1841.

I was at the school for the deaf and dumb, this morning, when that interesting little creature, Laura Bridgman, (who has but one sense, that of touch,) arrived from Boston, and made her first visit. She was accompanied by Dr. Howe, Mrs. Sigourney, and some other persons, and her coming seemed to be quite unexpected.

It is probable that there is hardly another person in the United States whose appearance at the school would create such a sensation among the hundred and fifty inmates. Her name was familiar to all the pupils, who had doubtless marvelled much how a dumb child, deprived also of the sense of sight, by which they themselves knew every thing, should be able to learn to read, write and talk.

When the news passed from hand to hand that Laura Bridgman was in the office, the teachers and pupils came thronging round her, and asked the room and passage way which all the way up the stairs, the school doors of little girls, with sparkling eyes and animated faces, eagerly gazing at each other, and conversing rapidly in dumb show.

It was a beautiful sight to see so much intelligence and happiness among these unfortunate, but the principal attraction was little Laura, who, having taken off her bonnet and gloves, appeared one of the most interesting children you ever saw. She was small and delicately formed, with beautiful features, and a complexion, so graceful in her motions, so animated her gesticulation, and so full of life, was her countenance, that but for the green ribbon blind over her eyes, she would have been called her one of nature's most gifted children. Such is the power of the soul, such its independence of sense.

They told this child in a crowd, without opening of light to pierce her eyes during darkness, without a sound to break the dreamy stillness, without an odor even to show the presence of others, yet joyous as a bird, yet conscious of every thing that was going on, endeavoring to shake hands with all, and to learn the names of all, delighted to find that every one could talk in her finger language, and to be enjoying the freedom of existence, and speaking in dumb but expressive language the praise of Him who will let the happiness of all whom he creates.

She was very impatient to meet Julia Brace, the only person in the world, perhaps, whose privation of sense approached as nearly to hers, and about whom it seems, much had been told her. At last Julia was brought down, and the two met, and felt of each other. But what a difference between the two! Julia is a woman grown and unimpaired in her appearance, because she is without imagination, with no vivacity, with out any expression of face. She was made to understand, by placing her fingers on Laura's eyes, and on her ears, that she was blind and deaf like herself, but her countenance changed not, she manifested little interest, and in a moment or two began to withdraw from the child, who clung to her, put around her neck a chain of her own braiding, and kissed her. Vain imitations of affection! Julia coolly put into her pocket the present which Laura had brought her, and was making off from the child, who she also saw a while in evident and who eagerly asked of others, "Why does she push me, why does she not love me?"

What a contrast in their characters! Laura, of cheerful emotion and sympathy, and would have been without in mind, while Julia, having no other present, was desirous of terminating the interview, and carrying off her possession!

Such is the effect of education, such the consequence of having the moral and social nature, as has been done in the case of Laura, or of exercising only the lower propensities, and showing the human being to be as the brute, who knows himself and for himself alone!

The kind and good people who have the charge of Julia Brace seem to do for her all they can, but this is little, for they have no means of communicating with her. I learn that they think of sending her to the school for the Blind in Boston, in hope that the method by which Laura has been taught may be successful with her, and although it seems to me almost hopeless, for she is thirty-five years old, and her faculties have so long lain inactive, that she can hardly be roused to perform their functions, nevertheless the chance should be given to her.

I would tell you more about the admirable institution, where I beheld the scene, which I have described, did I not know that it is familiar to you and to most people, but neither you, nor I, nor any one, can ever become so familiar with the reflections which a sight of the deaf and dumb, or of any unfortunate, naturally suggest. Nature never utterly abandons her children, she furnishes them some compensation for every privation, she places means of enjoyment within the reach of the most desolate existence, even a boon to the innocent, there is no despair, but that of guilt!

How then should we, when shown the above lately shown our gifts to whom she lays open all her raptures and sources of enjoyment in the world of sight, and sound, and odors, and tastes, how should we wear above petty annoyances, and rejoice in our existence, so live as most to praise his Giver!

Gold Medal.

The members of the Washington Total Abstinence Society, in New York, have presented to Capt. Wisdom, their late President, a splendid gold medal, as a token of their appreciation of his services in the cause of temperance. Captain Wisdom has removed to Philadelphia. On Monday, says the Organ.

A large number of the members assembled at the Hall, for the purpose of escorting him to the boat. He was there presented with a magnificent cane, beautifully mounted, by Mr. John Hill, and after an affectionate farewell, he left us to take up his abode at another city. He has been a faithful officer, a useful member, an ornament of the Society, of which he was the first founder. We part with him in sorrow, but with the fond hope that what has been our loss will be to the Washingtonians of Philadelphia a gain.

Manuscripts of the Dead.

It is always a sad and terrible thing where there is any human feeling left in the heart, that of examining the papers and letters of those who are gone. The records of trustful affections, of disappointed hopes, of tenderness perhaps misplaced, perhaps turned by the will of fate to scourge the heart that felt it, are there all before our eyes. Side by side, at one view, and in one instant, we have before us the history of a human life, and its sad and awful moral. We have there the picture of every bright enjoyment, of every warm domestic blessing, while written by the hand of death beneath them is the terrible truth—These are all passed away forever, and so will it soon be with those like them.

Dark features of the Age.

In the general tone of this discourse, it may be thought, that I have proposed to vindicate the present age. I have no such thought. I would improve, not lull it. I feel its imperfections, and see options as deeply as any, though I may be in some single features that give others little pain. The saddest aspect of the age, to me, is that which undoubtedly contributes to social order. It is the absorption of the multitude of men in outward toil, and the selfish pride, which is never tired of the labor of accumulation, and which keeps men steady, regular, respectable drudges from morning to night. The case of a fly, in the mud, is a good example of this.

But the worst sign, the alarming down of almost all the minds of a community to low, perishable interests. It is a sad thought, that the infinite energy of the soul have no other outlet than to cover the back, and fill the belly, and keep caste in society. A few nerves, hardly visible on the surface of the tongue, are the most of the endless str around us. Undoubtedly, eating and drinking, dressing, house building, and estate-keeping, are matters not to be despised, most of them are essential. But surely he has a higher use than to adorn this body, which is soon to be wrapped in gray clothes, than to keep warm and flowing in blood, which is soon to be cold and stagnant in the tomb. I rejoice in the domestic activity of the age, and I expect much of it to be given to our outward life. But in all this activity, there should preside the great idea of that which is alone ourselves, of our inward spiritual nature, of the thinking mind, of our supreme good, of our chief end, which is to bring out, cultivate, and perfect our highest powers, to become wise, holy, disinterested, noble beings, to unite our selves to God by love and admiration, and to reveal his image in his children.

The vast truth of the age of which I have spoken is too much confined to the sensual and material, to run, and show. Could this activity be swayed and permeated by a noble aim, not a single comfort of life would be retrenched, whilst its beauty, and grace, and interest would be unspeakably increased. There is another dark feature of this age. It is the spirit of collision, contention, and discord which breeds forth in religion, in politics, in business, in private life, a result and necessary issue of the selfishness, which prompts the endless activity of life. The mighty forces which are its momentary setting in society are not and cannot be in harmony, for they cannot be governed by love. They are discordant. Life has now little music in it. It is not only on the field of battle that men fight. They fight on the exchange. Business is war, a conflict of skill, management, and too often fraud, to snatch the prey from our neighbor is the end of all this strife. Religion is war, Christians, forsaking their one Lord, gather under various standards, to gain victory for their sects. Politics are war, breaking the whole people into fierce and unscrupulous parties which forget their country in conflicts for office and power. The age needs nothing more than peace makers, men of serene commanding ability, to preach in life and word the gospel of Christian brotherhood, to dily the fires of jealousy and hate.

Dr. Channing.

Obscure Passages in the Bible.

A gentleman who visits with great regularity the Philadelphia Penitentiary, the inmates of which he partly prompts him to instruct, has given a Bible to a convict, who would ask him, it is a visit, with much shrewdness, some difficult quest on formed from passages of the sacred volume. Each time declaring he would not go on, it was not first explained to him. The gentleman was unable to persuade him that it would be best for him to well upon those passages which he could easily understand, and which plainly applied to his situation. After many fruitless trials to induce the convict to this course, his friendly teacher said, "What wouldst thou think of a very hungry man, who had not eaten a morsel of food for the last twenty-four hours, and was asked by a charitable man to come in and sit down at a rich covered table, on which were large dishes of choice meat, also covered ones, the contents of which the hungry man did not know. Instead of satisfying his hunger by body with the former, he raises one cover after another, and insists on finding out what the unknown dishes are composed of. In spite of the advice of the charitable man to partake first of the more substantial dishes, he dwells with obstinate inquiry on nice compounds, until overcome with exhaustion, he drops down. What do you think of such a man?" He is told, said the convict, "and I will be one no longer. I understand you well."

Conviction of a Juvenile Incendiary.

A small colored boy only thirteen years of age, named David Johnson, recently a servant in the employ of Dr. Burns, of Frankford, Philadelphia, was on Wednesday tried and convicted in the Court of General Sessions, before Judge Barton, for setting fire to the barn of his master, because his mistress had whipped him. The young offender was sentenced to two years imprisonment at the penitentiary.

Continental Congress.

This body, when it first assembled in Philadelphia in September, 1774, consisted of only 55 members. Mr. Sparks, in his lecture before the Historical Society in New York, describes the curious manner in which the members were paid. It differs materially from the mode practised at the present day. It appeared that each Colony paid its own delegation. New Hampshire allowed to each of its expenses, a servant, two horses, and half a guinea a day. Massachusetts, expenses and $2 a day. Connecticut, expenses and $3 a day. Rhode Island and Maryland, 40 shillings a day, with nothing for expenses. New York, $1 a day, without expenses. Pennsylvania, 20 shillings a day, and expenses. Virginia, a half guinea a day. North Carolina, £500 per annum. South Carolina £300 per annum. Georgia £100 per month while in session.

The Liverpool Mechanics Institute.

This Institution, which was first commenced by James Muspratt, Esq., its President, is by far the most extensive and splendid Institution of the kind in the kingdom. The buildings of the Institution cost no less than £15,000, it contains upwards of 8,000 members, 550 pupils in three day schools. 600 pupils in 15 or 16 evening classes, it has 50 teachers regularly employed, whose salaries amount to £5000 per annum, a library of 70,000 volumes, with 1,000 readers, and a daily distribution of 250 volumes, and public lectures twice a week, attended by audiences varying from 700 to 1,500. There are now in England 246 Mechanics Institutions, all of them established within 15 years.

"Oh dear! mother, I've got the cramp in my toe," said a girl of ten years, tripping into a house in Camp street, yesterday. "My darling, how vulgar you talk," said the exemplary mother, "why could not you just as well have said, I have a muscular contraction in one of my pedal extremities?"

Magnetism.

The Whigs are now in a magnetic slumber, and like all persons in that state, seem to have but little care of what is going on, and yet it is a singular fact, that not one of them, even in his dreams, has turned a hair.

Stolen Goods Found.

A large deposit of stolen goods was discovered on Monday last, at Augusta, in a large box under ground in a cellar. The goods, says the Journal, belong to Messrs. J. L. Sturt and Co. of Richmond. Benj. Holmes who occupied the house has been bound over to take his trial.

PRICE 6 cents oz 19 cts 4 oz 62 cts 1 lb. A remedy that has gained a great reputation for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Pulmonary Sore Throat, and all diseases of the Voice for Vocalists and Public Speakers, and in consequence of the extensive sale and wonderful efficacy for curing the above complaints, has caused a number of Druggists and Confectioners to counterfeit this valuable Cough remedy. An imi-
